Artist Bio

Alice Rosa is a Fellow of the Society of Botanical Artists in London. Her work has been exhibited in London, San Francisco, Boston and other locations across the USA. She graduated with distinction from the Distance Learning Diploma Course of the Society of Botanical Artists. Alice was born and raised in Italy. She has a degree in foreign languages and literature from the University of Verona. She also holds a degree in art conservation from IVBC in Venice, where she specialized in the restoration of polychrome wood sculptures and paintings on panel. She currently lives in Concord, MA.

Alice's work is inspired by the humble power and beauty of nature, from the simplest wild flower to the most elegant peony. Studying botany gave her a much deeper understanding of the delicacy and vulnerability of plants and therefore the impact that humans have on the natural world. Her wish is to raise awareness of the wonders of nature through her art, and with that, encourage a deeper respect for the environment.
